TURBOCAST

Low-Temperature Thermoplastics (LTTs) are the materials that are widely used to fabricate patient-customizable splints, braces and/or supports. LTT material activates in relatively low heat conditions (e.g., water between 60-75 °C). Unlike the high-temperature thermoplastics, after warming up, LTT materials can be placed directly on the patient while molding the splint.

Physico-chemical:

- Light-weight;
- Plastic "memory" and ease of remolding;
- X-ray transparency;
- Maintenance of the material's properties through multiple application cycles;
- Stretching capacity for up to 15%;
- Long shelf life;
- Biodegradability;
- Moisture resistance.

Biomedical:

- Non-toxic, hypoallergenic;
- Latex-free;
- Excellent conformability;
- Ease of application, removal and re-molding;
